LogistiCare Honors Two Employees as “Volunteers of the Year”

ATLANTA -- LogistiCare President and Chief Executive Officer, John Shermeyen, today announced that Margy Hovren and Meghan McCann have been selected as “Volunteers of the Year” for their individual contributions to company community outreach efforts.

Hovren, assistant operations director for LogistiCare’s Wallingford, Conn., network operations center has been with LogistiCare since 2002. Her volunteer efforts in 2004 included leading numerous outreach activities and creatively partnering with local community organizations.

McCann is the healthcare manager in LogistiCare’s Las Vegas central business office. She has been with LogistiCare for one year. McCann was instrumental in helping lead the outreach activities as LogistiCare added the state of Nevada as a client for the company.

“I am very proud of the efforts of all our employee volunteers, but Margy and Meghan definitely stand out from the crowd,” said Shermeyen. “Their level of involvement, energy and enthusiasm has set the standard on which we hope to continue to inspire others as we look to further grow our community outreach efforts.”

Hovren and McCann were selected based on the leadership and creativity they displayed, along with the many unselfish hours they volunteered as the embodiment of the spirit of LogistiCare’s community outreach program.

LogistiCare’s nearly 700 employees contributed 1,699 volunteer hours in 2004. The new company goal is 2,005 in 2005.

The volunteer of the year honors came as part of LogistiCare’s annual Founder’s Cup presentation. The Founder’s Cup award is presented annually to the company’s network operations centers and central business offices/regional offices that have contributed the “most” to the communities in which they operate.
