

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
August 23, 2005

Contact: Ed Domansky
770.994.4579

LogistiCare Supports ‘Straight Scoop’ on MetroAccess

ATLANTA -- LogistiCare concurs with the view of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) about the Aug. 18, 2005 Associated Press story that ran with the headline "Metro Learns Expensive Lesson."

Metro's offers its "straight scoop" about the story on its Web site.

"We're gratified that WMATA took the step to post a clarification of the facts on their Web site," said John Shermeyen, president and chief executive officer of LogistiCare.

"Making sure that the real story is told is important.

“We also were pleased that The Associated Press Friday issued a revised version of their original story that eliminated accusations of bad behavior by LogistiCare with a supporting quote from a WMATA spokeswoman.”

LogistiCare has managed WMATA's MetroAccess program since 2000. During that time, the D.C.-area paratransit program has seen ridership increase from about 17,000 rides per month to now more than 100,000.

Headquartered in Atlanta, LogistiCare is the nation's leading provider of specialized transportation network management. The company's government clients include state Medicaid agencies, school boards, transit and paratransit authorities. Healthcare sector clients include hospital systems and many of the nation's largest managed care organizations.

--MORE--

LogistiCare Supports 'Straight Scoop' on MetroAccess
August 23, 2005

With its market innovation, proprietary software, and proven record of creating budget stability and program integrity, LogistiCare is well known as the leader in improving non-emergency transportation programs. On an annual basis, the company manages a national network of more than 700 transportation companies that provide more than 11 million trips to customers annually. For more information, visit www.logisticare.com.

#